Citizen Comment

Consider Pedestrians in Snows

A Tapawingo Road resident has these comments concerning snowfall and pedestrians:

I finished reading "Vienna Is Ready for Snowfall" in the January Newsletter. The article reminds me of last winter's problems with snow.

Snowplowing as done during last winter was without any consideration of the pedestrians. The snow was always piled by the snowplows at street corners and occasionally on the sidewalk. This not only makes crossing of streets difficult, but it is also hazardous to any pedestrian, including school children, who usually wait for their buses at street intersections. Snowplowing crews should be instructed not to pile up snow at street corners, on sidewalks or in front of driveways.

The last paragraph of the article requests that residents clear the snow from sidewalks next to their property. This is very important but, based on last year's experience, it does not work well, although property owners along the route I use have done the best they could. Snow clearing of sidewalks is important on all streets, but particularly so on those within walking distance (perhaps one and a half miles) from the Metrorail station.

Under normal weather conditions there are people who prefer to walk rather than drive to the Metro station. Last year during the snow storm even more so. Many people could not use their cars because they would not start or for other reasons and decided to walk to the station. It was not easy, though, because snowplows piled snow on the sidewalks (Nutley Street to the station) and because sidewalks were not cleared of snow.

Because of the well known problems of heavy traffic, parking and pollution, the Town of Vienna should encourage and give indirect incentives to pedestrians. Thus, I recommend that the sidewalks be cleared of snow by the Town rather than property owners. Although this would be an additional expense, the cost could be kept down by creatively using a combination of relatively low capital investment and voluntary commercial and private property owners participation. Such a program would benefit directly and/or indirectly all our citizens.

Spring Cleanup: A Solution?

In the continuing dialogue about the Spring Cleanup, the following comments were received, one from a Welles Street resident and the other from a town resident who also has a business on Maple Avenue:

The beauty of the town is indeed marred each spring by the profusion of trash that lines the streets in anticipation of the spring Cleanup. Previous writers have correctly identified the problem. Unfortunately, they propose the wrong solution! Their proposal to terminate the Spring Cleanup would wrongly deny to all the town residents the ability to readily cleanse their property from the ravages of winter and rid themselves of trash not suitable for normal collection. A better solution to the problem might be a little better scheduling and the punishment of the few who violate the Cleanup regulations.

As a resident of Vienna for over 30 years, I have witnessed the Town staff do an increasingly efficient job of collecting and disposing of large amounts of trash. In an effort to minimize the amount of time trash is apparent on the streets, the Town provides a schedule for the Spring Cleanup and requires that trash not be put out in advance of that schedule. The Town staff also amends its regulations almost yearly to prevent abuses to the Cleanup concept. (The notice regarding the prohibition against the discard of building

The Right Way to Yield the Right-of-Way

by Sgt. Thomas Wolfe
Fairfax County Fire & Rescue Dept.

Traffic . . . It seems to be getting worse every day. Add to that confusion a slew of emergency response vehicles with sirens and air horns blaring, and lights flashing like a disco dance floor. Now, we have a real mess!

How should we, as drivers, respond to red lights and sirens? Commonwealth of Virginia laws clearly state that the driver of every vehicle shall immediately move to a position as near as possible and parallel to the right-hand curb, clear of any intersection or highway, and stop when an emergency vehicle is approaching with warning lights and sirens operating.

Drivers already in the right-hand lane should yield to drivers who are making a move to allow an emergency vehicle to pass. Remember, all lane changes require signals indicating same. You should not make a move to re-enter the traffic flow until you are certain that no more emergency traffic is coming. Once you are certain that the road is clear, carefully re-enter traffic and return to normal driving conditions.

If we would all learn to obey this law, it would help ease this confusing situation, eliminate danger and help the emergency vehicle get to its destination quickly.

NOTE: Violation of this law constitutes failure to yield the right-of-way and is a moving violation, which could put three points on your driving record if convicted.

Black History Month Specials At Library

Rev. Martin L. King

Patrick Henry Library will host a free lecture and panel discussion on blacks in the military on Tuesday, February 2, at 7:30 p.m. Also featured from February 1-19 is a traveling exhibit entitled "Don't Grieve After Me," documenting the black experience in Virginia from 1619 to 1986.

"Blacks in the Military" features retired Army Colonel William DeShields, a military historian specializing in blacks in the service since the Revolutionary War. Speaker Sylvia Taylor will discuss education of blacks and the effect on career perspectives. Taylor is a teacher at Louise Archer Elementary School, originally founded for blacks.

The exhibit title "Don't Grieve After Me" was adopted from a traditional Virginia song celebrating emancipation. The 25-panel exhibit features over 70 photographs selected from the picture collections of archives, museums and libraries throughout Virginia and beyond. The photos portray the establishment of black Virginia culture, the wide range of skills and professions of blacks, as well as educational achievements, community struggles and accomplishments. The exhibit also looks at family, community and religious expressions.

Organized by the Hampton University Museum, with cooperation from the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the exhibit was funded in part by the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy.

Also as part of Black History Month, the library will present a free performance by storyteller and jazz musician Jamal Koram at 2 p.m. Saturday, February 27.

Jamal has performed on television and at area folk festivals. He combines jazz, black studies, child development and education, and an ability to fascinate and entertain all ages with his program. Jamal's stories and music are drawn from African and Afro-American folklore, traditions and oral history.

Space is limited, and registration begins two weeks prior to the performance. Call the library at 938-0405.

Senior citizens who are unable to visit the Community Center may arrange for a consultant to visit their homes by calling Harry Thompson at 560-4293.

Citizen Comment

materials generated by contractors cited in the January Newsletter is an example of their efforts to correct abuse.)

The more equitable solution to the problem of the town's unsightliness as a result of the Spring Cleanup then appears to be twofold. First, the Town staff should consider developing a more definitive schedule. Instead of the current type schedule that allots weeks for trash pickup in each of the four quadrants of town, the staff should consider developing a pickup schedule for smaller segments (e.g., northeast quadrant between Beulah Road and Park Street). Second, and perhaps more important, it is time to take action against those few of our neighbors who selfishly ignore the regulations and who care not a wit about the unsightly view they present to their neighbors. These are the people who put out their trash days, weeks and sometimes months in advance of the scheduled pickup. The Town should assess a special pickup fee and impose a sizable fine on these offenders. It would not take too many substantial fines before "the word got out" and the majority of residents who appreciate the Spring Cleanup could also appreciate the beauty of spring in Vienna.

I have just read the "Citizen Comment" on the Spring Cleanup in the January Newsletter, and I couldn't agree more. I, too, have been a resident of this town for 22 years and am saddened by the mess around our town during this period of time. Please decide on another means of collecting all of this trash.

My neighborhood looks terrible, usually during the Easter season. There must be more than two people who feel so strongly about this situation. So for heaven's sake, do something about it, officials of Vienna.

Radon Test Recommended

Radon, an odorless, colorless and tasteless gas, has been found in elevated levels in some homes in the metropolitan area. Exposure to elevated levels of radon has been associated with an increased risk of developing lung cancer. The Fairfax County government is encouraging citizens to test their homes for radon. Testing is simple, and there are many actions that can be taken to reduce radon if high levels are found in a home.

As part of its comprehensive program to address radon in the county, an additional 1,200 houses are being tested to determine the prevalence of radon. A two-year study, screening 2,400 homes over two winters, was begun in December 1986 and will conclude next month.

Radon is a naturally occurring gas produced by the radioactive decay of uranium and radium in soil and rock. There are several ways for radon to enter homes. It moves through natural cracks, fractures and joints in the soil and rock to reach the house. The soil gas containing radon can collect under basement or ground floor slabs, as well as open areas in the basement floor such as unfinished earth floors, sump pump cracks, floor drains, crawl spaces and openings around pipes.

In addition, pressure differences between the inside and outside of the house affect radon entry. Factors that result in lower pressures in the house relative to the outside atmosphere will enhance the movement of soil gases and radon into the house. These factors include high winds and rainstorms, home heating, and depletion of indoor home heating, and depletion of indoor air by furnaces and other appliances that draw indoor air in their operation.

The County Health Department has citizen information packets available that include the EPA's brochures "A Citizen Guide to Radon" and "Radon Reduction Methods." Also included are listings of radon testing and remediation firms. To obtain a packet, call the Radon Hotline, 246-2300.

Each item will be catalogued with the necessary information, any special instructions, and release forms. If the owner wishes, the items will then be returned until requested for display in 1990.

During the month of March, the committee will be seeking information on Vienna schools.

General Assembly Information Daily

Daily access to the Virginia General Assembly legislative information is available for the 15th consecutive year through the Fairfax County Public Library. Any organization, individual, government agency or business may register for this free service offered by the Virginia Room at Fairfax City Regional Library, 3915 Chain Bridge Rd.

The library's on-line access to the General Assembly's legislative computer provides daily bill status, committee schedules and a "mini journal" of transactions in the House and Senate throughout the 1988 session. Printed subject indexes to legislation, copies of all bills and documents, and other important information is also available.

All library patrons who register for the service receive the Guide to the General Assembly, which lists the names, addresses and phone numbers of all legislators. The guide also includes maps showing the outlines of county house and senate districts.

To register for the Legislative Information Service, call 246-2123.

The '88 General Assembly session convened on January 13, and some 2,000 individual bills or resolutions were expected to be introduced, together with a line item $22 billion budget.

All Jaycees Welcome at Party

The Vienna Jaycees will celebrate their 30th anniversary with a party on Friday evening, February 27, at the Fairfax American Legion Hall on Oak Street in Fairfax. Tickets are on sale until February 13 at a cost of $20 each for dinner and dance or $8 for just the dance. A program book is being assembled with space for messages and ads; both businesses and individuals are invited to buy space.

Anyone who has been a Vienna Jaycee at any time since 1958 is invited to the party. For more information or to make sure your name is on the invitation list, call Maggie Bushlack, 938-7131; Anne Lee, 620-5110; or Owen Beirne, 524-3211.

These include contributions to the Vienna Community Center, the Madison High School refreshment stand and press box, the mobile intensive care unit and the Center Street playground. Other projects have been annual trips to camp for mentally retarded citizens, Special Olympics, a brace fund, landscaping at a local hospital, blood drives, assisting with the annual Halloween Parade, and the annual Needy Kids Shopping Spree at Christmas.

Buckle Up for Safety

Now It's the LAW!

Benefit Art Auction at Westwood

The Fairfax Choral Society, in cooperation with the Fine Arts Gallery of Ardmore, Pennsylvania, will present a benefit art show and auction on Friday, February 19, at Westwood Country Club starting at 7:30 p.m. The $10 admission price includes a complimentary glass of wine with cheese, entertainment by the FCS Chorale, and eligibility for door prizes.

Featuring original oils, watercolors, sculptures, enamels, etchings, lithographs and other graphics, the auction will begin at 8:30 p.m., following a one-hour preview of the art. The majority of the art has opening bids ranging from $35 to $75. A Collector's Corner will include works by modern masters such as Rockwell, Calder, Delacroix and Miro.

For tickets and more information, call the FCS office at 442-8212.

Founded in 1962, the Fairfax Choral Society is one of the oldest volunteer community choral groups in the area. Under the leadership of Robert McCord, the two performing groups of the FCS are the 85-voice chorus, which performs large choral works, and the 22-voice Chorale, which performs music from Bach to rock.

One of the organization's accomplishments has been the establishment three years ago of a Young Vocal Artists Competition, which gives both financial and professional encouragement to aspiring singers. Future plans include a Children's Chorus, a training program for community singers, and performances for various segments of the community.
